

Jarvis Peter 1996. Learning and marketing

- This paper explores the relationship between education and learning in the market of contemporary society. It recognises the differences between education and learning and suggests that there are many other providers of learning opportunities than the educational institution. However, the educational learning commodity is expensive and so a grey market is emerging for learning opportunities, in which learning opportunities for the elderly play a leading role.

Aikuiskasvatus 1/1996.